ORIGINS OF THE ALLAN JEFFERIES TRIAL

During the 1930s Allan Jefferies had become one of the country's most outstanding competitors in Open Trials. His successes prompted the Yorkshire Centre to honour him with a Trophy. A fund was opened by the Yorkshire Centre for such a trophy in August 1939, with Norman Dixon as secretary/treasurer. Donations were set at 5/-(25p) for clubs and 1/-(5p) for individuals; the fund was to close in September, but the outbreak of war caused postponement. The fund was reopened in 1945 and a Silver Rosebowl (valued at £1500 in 1989) was purchased. Capacity Class Cups were donated by other prominent West Yorkshire Group Clubs and Mr Frank Ellis donated a trophy for the runnerup, this subsequently became the Sidetcar Award. Bradford Club undertook to organise an Open (National) Trial in 1947, using sections around Howarth and Skipton. It was won by T. Wortley and runner up was Allan riding a 350 Triumph Twin.

In 1949 the event moved to Upper Wharfedale, the start being at Long Ashes near Thresfield. In 1956 a complete change in format, when it was run on ISDT lines to provide the country's riders practice for this style of event. After a miss in 1957, due to Foot and Mouth the trial reverted to traditional lines, with the sidetcar class introduced in 1961. The following year the Capacity Classes were abandoned and the Cups reallocated to overall placings and the start moved to Varnbury for several years before moving to its present location at Skirfare Bridge.
