The Yorkshire Dales National Park

Many aspects of the Dales landscape make the National Park special. Much of the southern area of the park is first and foremost limestone country. Caves, potholes, scars, dry valleys and limestone pavements make up the finest limestone scenery in Britain. In the North of the park, and at the head of the southern dales such as Wharfedale, the celebrated farming landscape of flower rich hay meadows, dry-stone walls an scattered barns is distinctive and attractive. Throughout the Dales, waterfalls, historical villages and sweeping moorland also contribute to the charm and beauty.

Although protected on behalf of the Nation, the Yorkshire Dales National Park is not owned by the nation. It remains largely in the hands of private individuals. While visitors enjoy the countryside, working life goes on for farmers, gamekeepers and other. We all need to respect the many uses to which the land is put.

Today the Y.D.N.P. Authority works with landowners and others to protect the beauty and character of the landscapes, the rich and diverse wildlife, and the cultural heritage. There are many pressures on the landscapes of the dales, and the management of the park can be a difficult balancing act. Quarrying, changes in agricultural methods, traffic congestion, erosion of recreational routes, and the pressures for development can all affect the quality of the countryside.

The Y.D.N.P. Authority also works to provide opportunities for appropriate forms of outdoor recreation. The network of public rights of way in the Dales measure 2000 kilometres in length and is clearly marked on the Ordnance Survey Outdoor Leisure Maps. The network is made up of footpaths (for walkers only), bridleways (for walkers, horses and cyclists only), and byways (open to all traffic). Everyone using the Dales for relaxation or enjoyment should remember that others too come for these purposes. Always respect the needs of those who use the countryside in other legitimate ways.

Before setting off for a visit to the Dales check out the weather first by calling Dales Weathercall on 0891 500 748 (calls charged at 36p/minute cheap rate, 48p/minute at other times).

The best way to find out about outdoor activities and visitor attractions in the Dales is to visit a National Park Centre. There are six located around the Dales the nearest being Grassington. Staff with local knowledge are available to answer questions. The centres are open 7 days a week from April to October.
